

WHAT IS

Health Professions Affinity Community (HPAC) is sponsored by Northeast Ohio Medical University (NEOMED), in collaboration with the Wright State University Boonshoft School of Medicine Department of Pediatrics and Dayton Children's Hospital. We offer after-school clubs to high school students interested in working in the health care field. The program emphasizes community outreach and health disparities.

By joining HPAC, you will have the opportunity to work in groups to identify a local health issue and design a project to help. You will present your work at Scholars Day, to be held in April.

HPAC will give you opportunities to impact your community while gaining leadership experience and connecting with professionals working in health care. You will learn more about different career paths and gain valuable skills.

You will develop skills in:

- Recognizing disparities and health and social issues
- Making personal and professional connections with your community
- Working with others to plan and lead a project
- Strengthening written and oral communication skills

With the HPAC program, prepare for a career in the health care professions and biomedical research through support for the ACT exam, mentoring, post-secondary enrollment options and volunteer opportunities.
