Abstract (when required)
The abstract is a one-paragraph summary, including the most important parts of the paper. Typically, an abstract covers the research topic and questions, participants, methods, results, data analysis, and main conclusions.
A. Heading should be centered (no bold, formatting, italics, underlining, or quotation marks). The abstract should be in block formatting (no paragraph indentation), is limited to 150-250 words, and includes keywords.

Body

A. Title: the full title of the paper is centered on the first line (not bolded)
B. Introduction: this section is not labeled and follows the title
C. Subject Headings: There are five levels of heading which are demonstrated below:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Tables

A. Table Numbering: all tables should be numbered using Arabic numbers (1, 2, 3, …)
B. Title: the title is italicized, title case, and should be clear and concise to explain relationships
C. Spacing: use generous spacing between columns and rows and strict alignment to clarify relationships within a table
D. Heading: each column should be labeled with a clear, brief heading
E. Lines: horizontal lines should be used for clarity (no vertical lines, color, or shading)
F. Body: consistent reporting of decimal places within the same column
G. Notes: if additional information about the table is needed, this should appear in the notes sections labeled Note. The notes should be placed under the table, and each note should appear on a new line. There are three different types of notes:
   1. General notes: refer to the table as a whole
   2. Specific notes: refer to the specific part of the table identified by a lowercase superscript letter
   3. Probability notes: used to specify the p-value for the statistical test

Note: For student papers, the American Psychological Association (2002) states that:

Double-spacing is required throughout most of the manuscript. When single-spacing would improve readability, however, it is usually encouraged. Single-spacing can be used for table titles and headings, figure captions, references (but double-spacing is required between references), footnotes and long quotations (p. 326).

References
Heading is centered, not bold; include only those sources cited within the paper.

Periodical/Journal Article

Article from an Online Periodical with DOI Assigned

Book
Author, A. A. (Year). Book title (edition number, if applicable). Location of publishing:

Publisher.

Book Chapter
Author, A. A. (Year). Chapter title. In editor(s) (Eds.), Book title (pp. x-x). Location of publishing: Publisher.

Government Publication
Online Document

Author, A. A. (Year). The title of article/work. Retrieved from website address

When there is no author for a webpage, the title moves to the first position of the reference entry.

Example:

Cite in text the first few words of the reference list entry (usually the title) and the year. Use double quotation marks around the title or abbreviated title: "("New Child Vaccine," 2001).

Note: Use the full title of the webpage if it is short for the parenthetical citation. Articles found on the web, like the example above, are not italicized in the reference entry and are not italicized but enclosed in quotations in the in-text citation, just like a newspaper or magazine article. Reports found on the web would be italicized in the reference list, as in Publication Manual (6th ed.) Examples 31, 32, and 33 on pp. 205–206. They would also be italicized in the in-text citation, just like a book.

Websites

For a passing reference to a website in text, the URL is sufficient; no reference list entry is needed.

Gussie Fink-Nottle has set up a discussion forum for newt fanciers (http://gfnnfg.livejournal.com/).

However, when you are citing a particular document or piece of information from a website, include both a reference list entry and an in-text citation. The key to creating the reference list entry is to determine the type of content on the web page. Basically, provide the following four pieces of information:

The in-text citation includes the author and date (Author, date), as with any other APA Style citation.

Direct Quotations

The sixth edition provides explicit rules for direct quotations and states that you must credit the source when “paraphrasing, quoting an author directly, or describing an idea that influenced your work” (p. 170).

If the quotation is less than 40 words, incorporate the quotation into the text and place quotation marks round the quotation. Cite the source immediately after the quotation and continue with the sentence.

Porter (1998) states, “The internetworked classroom has the potential (not yet realized) to empower students” (p. 5), and this research project examines this potential.

If the quotation you are using falls at the end of the sentence, enclose the quotation with quotation marks without including the quotation’s original punctuation. Here’s a sentence as it appears in the original text:

“Semantic frames/domains represent one of the two major organizing principles for conceptual structure” (Croft & Cruse, 2004, p. 32).

Here’s what the sentence looks like when quoted within a text:

In arguing for frame semantics, Croft and Cruse (2004) assert, “Semantic frames/domains represent one of the two major organizing principles for conceptual structure” (p. 32).
If the quotation has more than 40 words, use a block quotation. Begin the quotation on a new line and indent a half-inch from the left margin. Double-space the entire quotation, and at the end of the quotation, provide citation information after the final punctuation mark.

John Nicholson (1820) anticipated this effect when discussion farming methods in the nineteenth century:

Perhaps it would be well, if some institution were devised, and supported at the expense of the State, which would be so organized as would tend most effectually to produce a due degree of emulation among Farmers, by rewards and honorary distinctions conferred by those who, by their successful experimental efforts and improvements, should render themselves duly entitled to them.
