EXPERIENCE

Boonshoft School of Medicine, Wright State University, Dayton, OH

- 07/2021 - Associate Professor (Previous: Asst. Professor 2016 – 2021) Research area:
Present Healthcare and Homeland Security, Leadership, and Crisis Decision-making.

Research area #1: Identifying high-risk individuals who are potential targets for radicalization and providing them with the tools to choose a different path. This is done by studying the mindset of terrorists, as well as up to 50 variables of American citizens charged with acts related to terrorism, in order to develop an analytical approach to predicting violent extremism.

Research area #2: My research concentrated on the way crisis decisions are made, using both numerical and qualitative data. I looked into the stress factors that influence decision-makers in a crisis and studied the types of processes used by global leaders when making decisions. Based on the analysis of their answers, a new crisis decision-making model was created.

directed the CBRN Certificate Program within the Department of Pharmacology & Toxicology, Boonshoft School of Medicine, which offers live webinars from industry experts, tours, and other unique offerings—designed to provide military and civilian professionals in the CBRN field an in-depth understanding of a wide variety of threats.

Key Accomplishments:

- 2009: Developed and implemented the program, one class per semester, with Battelle scientists' adjunct faculty responsible for two courses and Oroszi for the third.
- 2012: Recruited Military officer and CBRN Certificate graduate to direct the three CBRN Courses and offer all three courses each semester
- 2015: Expanded the program to the national level with funding by the BSOM, achieving profitability in the first year, three years ahead of schedule
- 2015: The state approved a reduced rate for government employees, offering in-state tuition +$10.
- 2019: CBRN Program goes international, accepting military students from Canada, France, New Zealand, and more
- 2021: Developed four undergraduate courses for CBRN undergraduate certificate
